Ngā mōkai-ā-Koko mud pool

This pool of boiling mud is named after Koko, a famous chief of the Te Puia pā (fortified settlement).

Natural steam vent cooker

This cooker is used for our Te Rā + Kai Ngāwhā experience where your lunch can be cooked by Mother Nature.

Pātaka Kai - restaurant and café

A unique culinary experience offering delicious indigenous Māori cuisine. Dine in or grab-and-go options available.

Kiwi Conservation Centre

See New Zealand's incredible flightless national bird – the kiwi. Find out why these birds are held in such high esteem by Māori.

Rotowhio marae and concerts

Concert times: 10:15am, 12:15pm, 3:15pm. 45 minutes long.

A marae is a tribe's gathering place. Meet at the waharoa (carved archway) for a concert. Tickets are required (purchase at entrance).

Heketanga-ā-Rangi

This waharoa (entrance) combines traditional stories with contemporary Māori sculpture, based on spiritual guardians of our tribe.

Te Whakarewarewa Thermal Reserve, Rotorua, New Zealand

These attractions are located on the map inside

Pōhutu geyser

Pōhutu is the largest geyser in the southern hemisphere. She erupts once or twice each hour and can reach heights of 30 metres.

Wānanga (NZMACI schools)

Our schools train students in traditional Māori carving and weaving. Watch students continue the proud traditions of their ancestors.

Papakura geyser

Although Papakura is currently inactive, she last erupted in September 2015 for a continuous 36 hours.

Ngāraratuatara cooking pool

This pool is used for Ingo, a unique cooking experience where food is cooked inside boiling water in flax baskets.

Lake Waikaukau

This lake is named after our ancestor Hātūpatu. It is very acidic, yet birdlife swim in and around these waters.

Pikirangi village

This reconstructed historic village gives you a feel for how Māori people lived before the arrival of Europeans.
